5G

FACULTY ARTICLE

THE FUTURE DEPENDS on connectivity. From artificial intelligence and self-driving cars to telemedicine and mixed reality to as yet undreamt technologies, all the things we hope will make our lives easier, safer, and healthier will require high-speed, always-on internet connections.

To keep up with the explosion of new connected gadgets and vehicles, not to mention the deluge of streaming video, the mobile industry has introduced something called 5G—so named because it's the fifth generation of wireless networking technology.

The promise is that 5G will bring speeds of around 10 gigabits per second to your phone. That's more than 600 times faster than the typical 4G speeds on today's mobile phones, and 10 times faster than Google Fiber's standard home broadband service—fast enough to download a 4K high-definition movie in 25 seconds, or to stream several at the same time.

During last two decades, the world has witnessed rapid evolution of cellular communication technologies from the 2G Global System for Mobile (GSM) to the 4G Long Term Evolution-Advanced (LTE-A) system. The main motivation has been the need of more bandwidth and lower latency. While throughput is the actual data transfer rate, latency depends largely on the processing speed of each node data streams traverse through. Together with throughput-related performance enhancements, some allied parameters, such as jitter, inter channel interference, connectivity, scalability, energy-efficiency, and compatibility with legacy networks, are also taken into consideration when developing new mobile technology.

The 5G supply chain is susceptible to the malicious or unintentional introduction of risks like malicious software and hardware, counterfeit components, and poor designs, manufacturing processes, and maintenance procedures. 5G will also use more information and communication technology (ICT) components than previous generations of wireless networks. Improperly deployed, configured, or managed 5G equipment and networks may be vulnerable to disruption and manipulation.

With some strategic approaches and standards, 5G can be incorporated into daily lives, these are-Encouraging continued trusted development of 5G technologies, services and products.

And 5G's low latency means that 5G could enable remote surgeries, allowing physicians in one location to manipulate network-connected surgical instruments thousands of miles away; medical providers may also be able to rely on 5G to rapidly transmit high-resolution images for use in diagnosis and treatment. Manufacturers can use 5G networks to monitor production lines remotely and maintain video feeds of their factory floors.

And even though 5G remains far from universally available, the telecom industry is already looking forward to the next big thing, the technology that will take advantage of areas of the wireless spectrum above 100 Ghz: 6G.

6 Technological Advancements in Cricket

STUDENT ARTICLE

The international cricket organizers are taking revolutionary steps to introduce technological advancement in the sports in order to boost the interest of the audience and bring more attraction to the game. A list of such technological developments have been considered here, which either recently or over the course of time have revolutionized the experience of Cricket.

1. The LED bails

Slightly heavier than the usual wooden bails, the LED zing bails are the latest technological induction in cricket.

2. Spidercam

The Spidercam is another remarkable improvement in the coverage of Cricket matches since it provides a unique angular view of the matches to the viewers.

3. Hawk Eye

The Hawk Eye is the most extensively used technology by the broadcasters to provide another perspective view for the Leg Before Wicket (LBW) appeals to the commentators and viewers.

4. HotSpot

Another recent breakthrough in the cricket technological commodities is the HotSpot implementation.

5. Snick-O-Meter

Also known as "Snicko" in the cricket dialect, the Snick-O-Meter was invented by Allan Plaskett to aid the umpires in detecting edge and the preceding caught behind the wicket.

6. Stump Camera

In order to provide a more in depth experience to the viewers, the Stump cameras are utilized to closely cover the game happening in the ground. Tiny yet quite advanced set of cameras are installed inside the stumps to provide a unique angle of coverage to the viewers.

Future of Automobiles

STUDENT ARTICLE

The global automotive industry is on the verge of disruption. Four technology-driven trends – electrification, shared mobility, connectivity, and autonomous driving—are leading the automotive industry to this disruption. These trends will shift markets and revenue pools, change mobility behaviour and build new avenues for competition and cooperation. The Indian automotive industry has started to experience these effects of the global disruption. It has announced (and later modified some) ultimatums for the next decade. India has great expectations of achieving a high level of penetration in e-mobility by 2030. The reason is not very surprising; the alarming levels of pollution indices which keep on rising and the colossal dollars the country must pay for annual crude oil imports.

E-mobility has arrived in India. In the Indian context, any discourse around Electric Vehicles cannot be disjointed from pollution and its impact, dependence on oil imports, dire need to have more renewable sources of energy. The automotive industry could benefit by viewing it not as a threat, but an opportunity.

There is a need to create an integrated policy to nurture this technology. An ecosystem approach is what will help achieve India's progress on electric mobility. The policy on 'Faster Adoption and Manufacturing of Hybrid and Electric vehicles' FAME I in 2015 and FAME-II in 2019 have in some ways been instrumental in successfully creating an initial but nascent market. However, there is an apparent shift in the focus of the Government towards supply-side measures that include manufacturing of critical components of EV technology.

But, there are challenges. The primary concerns have been around range anxiety (kms on a single charge) and the lack of charging infrastructure and several other factors. Some of them are:

Foldable displays

Remember the Nokia Morph smartphone concept from 2008? Sci-fi nerds have been dreaming of foldable displays for much longer, and they've finally hit mainstream devices in 2019. From the ill-fated Samsung Galaxy Fold to the all-new revival of the Motorola Razr, major smartphone manufacturers are drumming up a lot of interest in smartphones with flexible and foldable displays. While first-generation foldable smartphones are expensive and far from perfect, they do offer a peek into the future—bigger displays that fold into ergonomic shapes.

While foldable displays on smartphones are all gadget lovers can talk about these days, laptops are not far behind on the list. Earlier this year, Lenovo showed off a variant of its ThinkPad X1 with a foldable display that is dramatically smaller and lighter than the regular version. Not to be left behind, Microsoft has been teasing a pair of foldable devices—the Surface Duo and Neo—that use two screens that fold on a hinge instead of a single flexible display.

NASA Space Apps Challenge

HACKATHON

It was on the eve of engineer's day that the NASA space app challenge was conducted at Methodist College of Engineering and Technology. But the preparation began on the previous day when the challenges were released to the participants. The students had to select one from these challenges and pitch their idea at the event. This event was managed by various class coordinators and faculty members especially Mr.Pravin Thumukunta and Mrs Sailaja who had encouraged a majority of students to participate in the event and also the HOD of the CSE department , Mrs.Lavanya maam along with her team , not to mention the Director of The college Mr.Lakshmi pati Rao who aided the event. The top 4 teams would go to Delhi for the nationals of the NASA space app challenge.
